It has been hypothesized that activation of HOG1, the gene coding for the main osmosensor, triggers high osmolarity glycerol (HOG) production and cell membrane remodelling. This work demonstrates the production of HOG and the expression of HOG1 at the transcript and protein levels during maturation in the wine yeast Candida glabrata. The activity of the pyridoxine-dependent decarboxylase (EC 4.1.1.26) increased during maturation and the real-time qPCR analysis of the enzymes catalyzing the first reactions in the synthesis of HOG, i.e. ENO1, ENO2, ENO4, showed higher expression in early maturation compared to that at the end of fermentation. Confocal microscopy analysis of the expression of HOG1-GFP in C. glabrata yeast cells showed the transient appearance of the protein in the cell surface during maturation, which coincides with the activation of specific transporters involved in the transport of HOG and cell expansion. The data indicate the presence of a similar mechanism of adaptation of C.
